her bedside, and had manifested much concern regarding her condition.

As soon as he breathed her last he gave vent to his sorrow in bitter sobbing, which lasted until late in the night, and only subsided when sleep closed his heavy eyelids.

The next day the little fellow wept as much as ever, and refused all food. Tuesday evening his mother found him gasping for breath, and upon Dr. Flannery's arrival it became clear that a quantity of air had found its way into the cavities above the heart. Yesterday morning brought no relief to the little mental and physical sufferer, and at 9 o'clock he died with his sister's name upon his lips.

Dr. Robert McNally, Hagerstown, Md., writes: "I was reduced to a living skeleton by distressful ailments that completely exhausted me of all vitality. All the organs of my body—lungs, liver, kidneys, heart, sight, hearing, brain, nerves, etc.—were in disorder, and each gave me trouble in a greater or less degree. I doctored for kidney complaint and dyspepsia; I took compound cures; I did everything in my power to get relief. Mr. Wells, of Morris' drug store, told me to try Brown's Iron Bitters. Two bottles have made me feel like a new person. I believe I am permanently cured of all my distressing ailments. I weigh twenty-four pounds more now than I did a month ago."

The Masher and The Terrier.

New York Star.

A woman and a terrier dog reached the Union Depot, yesterday, half an hour before the time of the Grand Trunk train for Buffalo, and while the woman was waiting in the waiting-room as the best thing she could do, the dog made the tour of the room several times and then curled up on a seat not far away to get a wink of sleep before being turned over to the tender care of the baggage man. All things were so, when a young man with a good deal of cane and watch took a cool survey of the various passengers. The one nearest the dog not only had a cane, but a pleasant face, but she was all alone. After satisfying himself of this, the young man advanced, made a graceful bow, and inquired:

"Beg pardon, but do you go East?"

"She nodded."

"All I thought of, if you have any baggage I shall be most happy—ah—shall be most happy."

He had all the time been preparing to sit down beside her on the dog, and the sentence was not yet finished when he sunk gracefully back. Some dogs have been sat down on so often that they don't mind it, but this terrier had always been a pampered pet, and had been given proper time to shake off sleep and get his legs under him. When suddenly buried under 140 pounds of masher his ideas were not terribly confused, but not for long. A clock couldn't have ticked over six times when the young man began to rise up and whoop, and he was scarcely up when he made a course for the door which upset every handbox and satchel for a width of ten feet. As he went out of the door a black object let go of him and trotted back, and it was only when the dog began rubbing against his back toward to restore himself to his former round shape that anyone was able to discover why the frenzied young man had left in such a hurry.

Why No Scotchmen Go to Heaven.

Long years ago, in times so remote that history does not fix the epoch, a dreadful war was waged by the King of Scotland. Scottish valor prevailed, and the King of Scotland, elated by his success, sent for his Prime Minister, Lord Alexander.

"Weel, Sandy," said he, "is there a King we canna conquer now?"

"An' it please Your Majesty, I ken o' a King that Your Majesty canna vanquish."

"An' who is he, Sandy?"

Lord Alexander, reverently looking up, said: "The King of Heaven."

"The King of Heaven?"

"The King of Heaven," said the Scotch King, did not understand, but was unwilling to exhibit any ignorance.

"Just gang your ways, Sandy, and tell the King o' Heaven to gie up his dominions, or I'll come myself and ding him out o' them; and mind, Sandy, ye dinna come back to us until ye hae done our bidding."

Lord Alexander retired, much perplexed, but met a priest, and, reassured, returned and presented himself.

"Weel, Sandy," said the King, "hae ye seen the King o' Heaven, and what says he to our bidding?"

"An' it please Your Majesty, I have seen an o' his accredited Ministers."

"Weel, and what says he?"

"He says Your Majesty may e'en hae his kingdom for the a-kin' o' it."

"Weel, and what says he?"
